AS THE SPORTS YEAR COMES TO AN END...

BERKELEY CHAMPIONS

In a testament to our commitment to athletic development and exposure, The Berkeley Institute's Physical Education (PE) Department embarked on a memorable football trip back in February, during the cold winter months. The trip took selected student athletes to prep schools and colleges in Connecticut, New York, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire, providing invaluable opportunities for academic and football exposure.

Despite the chilly weather, the team embraced the opportunity to showcase their talent in training sessions with other schools in indoor domes. The sessions served as valuable learning experiences, allowing the team to identify areas for improvement and refine their strategies under pressure. Beyond the football field, the trip provided students with the chance to explore new environments, interact with students from different backgrounds, and foster unity within our teams. The trip enriched the students' educational experience, broadened their horizons and also created opportunities for enrolment into prep school. Overall, it was truly an unforgettable experience and the memories made on this trip will undoubtedly fuel their desire to embark on similar adventures in the future.
